

Need Playground for Youngsters At Canal Point School

Diamond Ball and Foot Ball Activities Cramped For Lack Of Space

Boys and girls who attend Canal Point school and take part in athletics are hampered in their efforts by lack of space in which to play their games. The diamond ball team has developed into an outstanding aggregation playing under the lack of space handicap. The football team organized last fall had to seek games mostly away from home on account of the fact that a field was not available at home.

Officials of the school are doing all in the power to give local boys ouths have at other schools of the county. Taking into consideration the absence of a necessary playground the boys and girls of the Canal Point school are doing unusually well.

Citizens of Canal Point and community are hopeful that some of a deal can be worked out between the county school board and owners of property adjacent to the school whereby more playground can be made available for the youngsters. It is a known fact that members of the school board are willing to acquire the necessary ground whenever it becomes available.

The boys and girls of today are the men and women of tomorrow and should be given every athletic advantage possible. Athletic training is as much a necessity today as book learning. Patrons of the school are hopeful that some satisfactory agreement can be worked out before the start of another school term.

whole blasted thing keeps right on growing just as if nothing had ever happened. The vine gets its name from the next miracle. When fully grown, a person can hold the vine with both hands, twist it and out will squirt clear, pure water—enough to fill a teacup. It's called the "hunker vine."
We say about 20 bushels of figs, all heavy and ripe, that sprang from tiny sprigs four months ago. We wondered over a young Chinese, who sprouted in odd angles and smoked strongly of the Far East; and a full row of mango trees bearing fruit, tasting like tropical smells. We noticed that several rows of dewberries (blackberries) were doing right well in a tropically hot sun, despite statements to the effect they won't grow in the summertime, and triple across the vines and pin-sized back-yard variety, but a mammoth tuber weighing about 15 pounds. There were several of them.

French artichokes were growing in leafy rows with bristly tendrils and colorful centers. They had been transplanted but appeared as healthy as the old apple tree in the back yard up north. Banana trees served as a windbreak, but they were bearing a luscious lot of fruit of which we partook.
The Poiret's shrubs were growing tall and healthy, and being more practically minded, several rows of black raspberries, currants and onions caught my eye. Now, you talk about carrots peeked out in bunches and in boxes. Well, we've seen carrots packed in bunches in the ground. Those juicy red carrots were crammed so close together that a hatpin could separate most of them. Mr. Hart related an experience of several years ago when he gave away 10 tons of carrots to Miami as an advertisement for his vegetable grow here. Before he sold the crop for a paltry sum of $5,000 an acre, he and several others counted 500,000 in an acre and 28 single carrots wedged into a double row one foot long.
Two acres of land are bumpy with pupae, trees that look like little overgrown mushrooms that anything else. They were sprouted from Cuban seed, of three varieties, raised in pots and now after a few days in the field look as if a ball of fruit will squash on your head any minute. They're "only" two feet high now and are going to bear fruit by November. That's what you call "quick action."

From Glenn St. Mary, several days ago, Mr. Hart related and brought one of each of the species of citrus trees growing there. He's got three rows of them, all different and each with a biological description as clear as mucky mud. But they're unusual, anyway. In addition, set aside in a sunny space, are 15 rare tropical trees that flower in profusion.

miscellaneous are not the scrubby type and even if you have to trust to lift them out of their earthy bed, they're worth it in that flavor.

To summarize but a few more varieties, Mr. Hart has four varieties of Japanese persimmons, the puckering pellets; five varieties of grapes, all doing well in the summer sun (skeptical note); five varieties of peach trees and a Florida plum tree. Mr. Hart grows his peaches on a tree and has peaches and apricots bending down to sunbathers from the limbs.

Mr. Hart has enough 'Royal Poincianas' to plant the whole town of Belle Glade. Growing in different stages in paper pots, the little treelets will give a shady spot to sunbathers from the front porch. They'll only come and get a few.

We munched on a few Sumner cherries, stolen off a heavily loaded tree, and a few others, but as we became accustomed to the sour but delicious tang. Four large grapefruit trees were present, well placed over the house, were selling for a dollar a dozen in Minnesota—three winters ago.

Mr. Hart listed seven flowers that will grow best in the summertime, not that others won't do likewise. They are: Chinese wisteria, zinnias, marigolds, balsam, cypress vines, cosmos and dahlias. All are represented in the Hart growing flower dictionary.

To mention but a few more, Mr. Hart has a healthy hollyhock side yard up hill, and a row of trees, including in various places, a blue moon vine mixed up with a passion vine and a tin bathtub full of Florida lilies. Date palms and Spanish moss make a picturesque background for oak trees, with odoriferous berries, "the trunks." And a story lies behind the mint bushes, for they're not ordinary mints. A particular Greek, so the story goes, paid the bushes to Mr. Hart with great reverence. They came, so he said, from the island where Christ was crucified, in Palestine, believe it or not. A similar mint bush was found on the approximate spot where the Chinese were crucified, but they bore no odor!

A tropical almond tree graces an even lawn in the rear of Mr. Hart's tropical "backyard." In the vines wind their way up the outside trellis. A silk cotton, live oak, magnolia and ginger tree complete the vast array of growing things that makes this spot about the most interesting one in the Everglades—at least from a naturalist's standpoint.

July 4th Barbecue At W. Palm Beach

Citizens of the Lake Okechobee region are already planning to attend the July 4th barbecue and athletic program on Wright field in West Palm Beach. The big day is being sponsored by the Elks lodge of that city and a full program is scheduled.
One of the outstanding events of the day will be the base ball game between Pahokee and West Palm Beach. A dollar ticket entitles the holder to dinner and supper, admission to the game and all other events of the afternoon.
That the Elks really prepared for visitors was shown last year when more than a ton of beef and pork was prepared for visitors. Hundreds and hundreds of loaves of bread were purchased for the event. Officials of the program for the big day are making plans to care for more people this year than ever before.

EXCESSIVE WORK Often Is The Cause Of Simple Anemia

Overwork, long hours indoors or improper diet often cause a deficiency of coloring matter (hemoglobin) and red cells of the blood. This condition is known as simple anemia. When it occurs we feel weak and lacking in energy. The appetite becomes poor, resulting in decreased blood. Simple anemia, if neglected, increases energy and makes you feel better. It is sold in all drug stores.

Unusually High Scores Follow Day of Stiff Competition

The Clewiston Golf Team of the Everglades Golf Association, after last week sitting in first place by a scant 1 1/2 point margin, increased to first place lead by an even 7 points in the Association's third meet of the season at the Clewiston Golf Club last Sunday. Clewiston, scoring 13 points for the day to Pahokee's 9 and Belle Glade's 5, grabbed off 3-point slams in three of its matches, while scoring two points in another and one point each in the remaining two flights.

BACKGROUND FOR PLANNING

Early in the 1920's the American people suddenly awoke to discover a green and sunny land, sliding down into the Caribbean from the southeastern tip of the continent, and finding this land with a way of life to their liking, they flocked southward by the hundred thousands. So fast did they come that for a time freight-freight-freight forced the railroads to embargo all but necessities.

Highways grow up with the country (1) Day before yesterday (2) Yesterday, (3) Today, (4) Tomorrow.

As wave after wave of population rolled over the land and Florida became more and more settled, some way had to be provided for people to get from one part of the state to another, to move produce to market, to handle the rapidly increasing flow of tourists, and so Florida began piecing together a statewide highway system.

Road System Begun

In 1925 the Legislature enacted the "Miller Bill," providing for a system of state roads. Since the passage of the act, the designated state road system has been in progress from time to time by subsequent legislation until it now approximates more than 12,000 miles, of which a considerable proportion is represented only by proposed locations. To finance a road building program, the 1927 Legislature raised the gas tax from one cent to two cents, a precedent followed by subsequent Legislature, until today Florida motorists pay an average cent tax on each gallon of gas.

Engineers had little precedent on which to work in designing roads for automobiles. The great trade routes that had grown up with the country had been largely supplanted by rail and water transportation. In Florida, the press of traffic denied the satisfaction of a large mileage as rapidly as possible. As a result, engineers were sacrificed for expediency. Many roads followed existing wagon tracks. They were narrow, high-wheeled and of the lumbering variety when it came to alignment.

Traffic Outgrows Roads

However, by the beginning of this decade, traffic had increased so tremendously. Cars were fast and brilliant. Traffic deaths were increasing at an appalling rate. Public safety of the matter was a great majority of the roads built five years previously were out of date, unable from the standpoint of safety and ability to take the pounding grind of traffic. Once again Florida faced a difficult road problem. The depression struck, emptying purses, and the Emmett Shelley, No. 1 Clewiston entry, played the best golf of the day, shooting the day's low gross with a 41-40-81 and taking a surprisingly easy 3-point victory over Belle Glade's Lou Beltracchi. The other outstanding performer proved to be Belle Glade's "Casper" Van Landingham with the day's low net of 74. Champion prize "winner of the day" was Sam Fleming of Belle Glade who soared to the skies with a 68-69-134-28-106 to win both the High Gross and High Net titles. Sam also outgrossed the field to win prize for guessing the day's low net for the field of 74.

Other prize winners were Emmett Shelley of Clewiston who won the Low Gross prize, H. C. "Casper" VanLandingham of Belle Glade, Low Net prize, Lou Beltracchi of Clewiston.

Volunteers Fight 2 Fires On Monday

Belle Glade's volunteer fire department was kept unusually busy Monday when two fires in widely separated sections called the boys into action at 2:15 a. m. and again at 6:00 a. m.

The alarm sounded early Monday morning when a filling station and grocery store, owned by Darrell Smith, of Pahokee, operated by J. H. Pellum, and located on the corner of Avenue C and the Palm Beach road, caught on fire.

Firemen arrived at the scene in time to prevent considerable loss to the building and to adjoining apartment buildings. Total damage was declared to be $575, including a total loss of $250 to the merchandise.

The fire department estimated $125 of $250 worth of insured fixtures and $200 damage to the uninsured building worth $500. Defective wiring was held responsible for the blaze.

The Police Department aided materially in clearing the scene for action.

No sooner had firemen resumed normal activities for the day when another alarm sounded, at 6 o'clock, sending a pumping unit truck to C. B. Rawls pump house on the north side of the Hillsborough Canal, opposite the Experiment Station. The shed, iron shed, housing an engine for operation of drainage pumps, and several drums of crude oil were destroyed in the blaze. The owners charged carelessness on the part of a negro attendant as the cause.

The new engine, valued at $420, and not insured, was completely destroyed. Tools, fertilizer and other destroyed brought the loss to about $700.

The first fire called out both trucks and eight men while the second blaze was answered by a mobile pumping unit truck and seven men.

Salvatore Bruised When Car Hits Pole

Carmen Salvatore, Pahokee member of the county school board, received scratches and bruises Tuesday afternoon when his car hit a sick place in the highway between Loxahatchee and West Palm Beach. Mr. Salvatore lost control of the car during a downpour and would have turned over had it not been for a telephone pole. The car righted itself after the impact and Mr. Salvatore proceeded to West Palm Beach where he attended a regular meeting of the county school board.

Captain Jim Moore Passes To Reward

Captain Jim Moore, who was a familiar figure in the Everglades during the winter months, is dead. Captain Jim, who is 82 was a strong and healthy person and actively engaged in selling Indian herb tonic, died in Strongsville, Ohio, at the home of his brother.

Captain Jim was reputed to be an old Indian fighter and said to be the last man alive who witnessed the shooting of Wild Bill Hickok in Deadwood, S. D. He was a deputy United States marshal when the Indian Territory was opened to settlement in 1889-90.

In recent years he had served as a technical advisor in the preparation of certain motion pictures by Cecil B. DeMille. He served for several years as a scout of the 186th Infantry Rough Riders during the Spanish-American war.

Captain Jim had an order of labels for his Indian herb tonic printed in the Belle Glade News office last winter saying that he would send for them in a few months. But Captain Jim's herb tonic is no more and the labels are but a reminder of a tall, lanky, weathered man who has been Indians before most of us were born.

Pahokee's hard-won baseball nine was toppled from its league-leading perch last Sunday when the Clewiston nine outscored the locals 6 to 2 at Clewiston.

Jimmy Stafford, playing first base, was spotted while playing the bag and eight stitches were required to close the wound. He will be able to resume play next week, was announced.

Wallo Sound and Pompano are next on Pahokee's card, both games to be played away. The team will return for an encounter next Thursday.

Martin's many friends were pleased at the action of the conference and he was receiving a hearty welcome the first of the week from members of his congregation and his townspeople.

Dr. Boyd Speaks To Belle Glade Rotes

Dr. F. T. Boyd, of the Everglades Experiment Station, was guest speaker at the regular Friday luncheon meeting of the Belle Glade Rotary Club at the Community Church. He spoke on Everglades grass conditions.

Dr. Boyd emphasized that the Everglades soil can produce more grass than any other section of the United States. As an example, he said that grass in this region will produce as much as 600 pounds of beef per acre in a year. The food value of any grass is as high as the soil will produce it, he concluded.

Other guests in attendance were H. S. Wright, of Long Beach, Calif.; Alf Nelson, of West Palm Beach; Ben Waring, John Thomas and L. T. Creech.
